

Business news: Charter Senior Living new manager for Brookdale Gainesville

Emily Mavrakis The Gainesville Sun

A new company is at the helm of a senior living facility in Gainesville, and multiple local business leaders and companies have been recognized for work in their fields.

Also in the news is a South Florida law firm, which announced a new legal studies scholarship available to minority students attending one of several schools in Florida, including the University of Florida Levin College of Law.

Here's a look at recent business news:

South Florida litigation firm Kluger Kaplan announces legal studies scholarship

Kluger, Kaplan, Silverman, Katzen & Levine has launched its inaugural H.T. Smith Legal Studies Scholarship to support minority law school students who have a strong connection with the South Florida community.

Scholarship recipients will receive $10,000 in financial assistance to attend eligible law schools in Florida and will be considered for a four- to six-week clerkship at the Kluger Kaplan law firm as well as an attorney position upon graduation from law school and completion of the Florida Bar.

Eligible universities include UF, University of Miami, Florida International University, Nova Southeastern University, St. Thomas University and Florida State University.

Applicants must submit their resume, current school transcript and a 500-word personal statement discussing who you are and why you are applying for the scholarship to info@klugerkaplan.com with the subject line "H.T. Smith Legal Studies Scholarship." The deadline to submit materials for the 2021-2022 academic year is June 1.
